PRIVATE HATCHERY LIST

In the State of Oregon

The Oregon licensed private hatchery list has been compiled by the Oregon Department of Fish & Wildlife.

Out of State Hatcheries
A partial list of hatcheries located in Washington, California and Idaho is included because of the greater choice of fish species and sizes available at these locations. Contact the state office for additional sources if needed.

Transportation Permit
It is unlawful for any person to transport any fish (except for aquaria) within the state from any stream, lake or body of water to another body of water, public or private, without first obtaining a permit from the Oregon Department of Fish & Wildlife. This applies to fish brought in from out of state as well. Permits may be obtained through any office of the Oregon Department of Fish & Wildlife or, in many instances, the hatchery can obtain the permit. The permit is free of charge.

Trout Stocking
Trout stocking in waters warmer that 68°F is not recommended, especially for the smaller sizes of fish. Early fall is the best time to stock. Early spring plants are satisfactory if fall stocking is not feasible. When fish are received, place bags or containers in your water supply 10 to 30 minutes and temper to within 6° of pond water before releasing fish into pond.

Warm Water Stocking
When stocking warm water species, care is needed to prevent planting unwanted species which may seriously complicate pond management. This is especially true if stocks are obtained from wild populations, or by seining ponds. Stock bluegills anytime from August to February. Plant bass in April, May or June or as soon as new hatches are large enough to transport. Bass should be established before bluegills are stocked.
