NRCS Plant Materials Program

The NRCS Plant Materials Program selects conservation plants and develops innovative technology to solve the nation’s critical conservation challenges. This program, which began in the 1940s, has served all 50 states and the District of Columbia. The program remains the only national program committed to the development and distribution of conservation plant species in gravel or public seed. Over the past 70 years, the program has developed a network of 26 Plant Materials Centers (PMCs) in the Northern Great Plains and Rocky Mountains, addressing the region’s unique resource concerns.
